No players in Lions history have played in more games and in more seasons than K Jason Hanon (left) and LB Wayne Walker (right). The two were united together prior to the Lions' home game vs. Washington November 7, 2004 when Hanon tied Walker's record for the most career games played with 200. Hanon now holds the franchise record with 255 career games. Last year marked Hanon's 16th season in a Lions uniform, breaking Walker's record (15) of the most seasons played by a Lions player.

For the past 44 years, one family has been as closely associated with the franchise than perhaps any other besides team ownership—the Kowalkowskis. In 1965, the Lions drafted guard Bob Kowalkowski who went on to have a long career on the offensive line before his last season, 1976, in Detroit. During the team's celebration of the franchise's 60th season in 1993, Bob was named to the Detroit Media All-Modern Era First Team that recognized the greats from 1964-93. In 1994, a second generation Kowalkowski, Scott, was signed by the Lions as a free agent. Bob's son played linebacker for the Lions and was a standout on special teams before his career ended in 2001. And since 1990, Scott's mom, Judy, has been a member of the organization's accounting department. The Kowalkowski's have not only impacted the team on the field, but they have contributed valuable service to the community as well. In 1973, Bob began a golf tournament that was called "The Kowalkowski Open" with friends from the Gladwin Lions Club International that inspired them to hold an annual tournament each year to benefit the Leader Dogs of the Blind. In 1991, that tournament grew into what now is known as Kolo Charities. That charitable organization, operated with significant pride by several family members and friends, supports various charities, including the Leader Dog School for the Blind in Rochester and the Detroit Lions Courage House which provides funds for the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Program of H.A.V.E.N. in Oakland County.
